

Megan Swier

Age: 24 Type: Acute Myelogenous Leukemia (AML)

“It is so hard to not have control of your own life; how you feel, act and what happens to you,” says Megan. She fought leukemia at 17 years old, and is so grateful that she had a wonderful support system around her. “I had such an amazing amount of faith and strength through the whole experience and I knew that if I put my life into God’s hands, it would work out the way He meant it to be. Now I am a survivor!” says Megan, “This is a great way to let others know that people do make it and end up having a great life.”

The American Cancer Society presents: “Snapshot of Survival”

Photo sponsored by: Avera Cancer Institute, Photography by: Jael Trieb, Brookings