

Denise chooses to think of her cancer as a “bump in the road,” and now is helping her mother over her bump in the road as she moves through her chemo treatments. “Seeing the process for my mom has given me a different perspective on just how individual cancer is,” she said. “While the emotions for my mom are different, the positive attitude and the support of friends and family remain a key element. The desire to continue raising money and support these efforts will hopefully allow me to add value to the organizations I will ALWAYS support in Sioux Falls, where my heart is.”
