

Nancy TerWee

"Cancer is not something anyone would ever wish for, but it taught me so many things about myself," Nancy says. Today, she feels she's a much stronger person because of her journey. A survivor since 2007, she credits having a strong faith as an important part in her recovery along with prayer, rest and positive thoughts. Nancy believes the Avera Race is important because it raises money that benefits local patients and families. "The race helps survivors in our area and is very special to me personally and professionally. And it's a lot of fun!"

SURVIVOR SINCE 2007

Look no further.

