

Janice O'Connor knows she can get through her battle with breast cancer. "I initially was asked to be a packet coordinator, but now I take a different twist—I also participate as a survivor. The Avera Race brings awareness to such a large group of people, and it benefits so many in our community." With husband, Mike, and their two daughters, Kayla and Erin, Janice worked as a nurse and now enjoys her time staying at home and volunteering. Having been diagnosed, she credits her faith, family and friends—in addition to a good medical team—for the support she needed.
